Care 'In' and 'Out' of Place
Towards sustainable wellbeing in mobile and diverse contexts

What is this research about?

In the decades after World War II, many people came to Britain from different countries and they made an enormous cultural, social and economic contribution to this society. Many of these people are now entering their senior years. We think it is very important to understand how they feel about ageing in the UK.

Therefore we would like to talk to you and hear more about your experiences and views about ageing in this country; to find out what care needs you have, and what kinds of support you can access from family, friends, community, faith groups, as well as local statutory services.

Our research project Care 'In' and 'Out' of Place is interested in learning from you about these issues. This is an opportunity for you to have your voice heard and to share your experiences and opinion with researchers, policy makers and care providers.

The project is embedded into the larger Sustainable Care Research Programme (2017-2021), funded by the Economic and Social Research Council and is based at the University of Sheffield. The main objective of the programme is to learn about how to achieve wellbeing for older people, their families, carers and paid care workers.

Who is being invited to participate in this research?

We would like to talk with people who:

- were born in the Caribbean, Ireland or Poland;
- are of pensionable age;
- live at home or in sheltered accommodation;
- are receiving care or help from other people (paid or unpaid) in their home;
- are willing and able to take part in an interview of approximately one hour (max one hour and a half) in duration.
