The Oxford Internet Institute (OII), in collaboration with the UK's National Centre for e-Social Science (NCESS), you to take part in a short (20 minute) survey. The survey focuses on the role of information and communication as the Internet in social research.

The survey is designed to be completed whether or not you use digital particular tools as it is a means to gain a centrality of a variety of tools to social research. The findings will be useful in directing future capacity building economic sciences.

Even if you aren't currently using research tools, we encourage you to complete the survey. The survey will be case, as it will skip a number of the questions based on your answers.

Regardless of how you have arrived at this page, your participation in this research is entirely voluntary, and you from the study at any time. If you have already entered responses to the questionnaire and wish to withdraw the study personnel at survey@oii.ox.ac.uk.

This survey takes most participants under 20 minutes to complete. Please be sure to continue all the way to the submit your data.

The statistical results will be publicly reported, but all information provided by individuals will be anonymized and individual. If you would like the results e-mailed to you, there will be an opportunity at the end of the survey to provide for this purpose.

0	No, I have not followed these developments
1	Yes, I have heard of this effort, but know little about it
2	Yes, I have followed it closely
3	Yes, I am personally involved in such developments

▶ New Developments in Social Science Research

A number of social and computer scientists are involved in developing advanced Internet and Grid technologies to support social science research. This is sometimes called 'e-Social Science'. A more general term for these approaches in science, social science, and humanities disciplines is 'e-Research' or 'cyberinfrastructure'.

Are you aware of developments in this area?

- ☐ No, I have not followed these developments
- ☐ Yes, I have heard of this effort, but know little about it
- ☐ Yes, I have followed it closely
- ☐ Yes, I am personally involved in such developments

Question: ESS_INTEREST
