Thank you for agreeing to take part in this study.

In this research we are interested in examining the process by which people make word-group associations. This is a topic of considerable interest to cognitive neuroscientists interested in neural networking in the brain.

Your task is to look at images describing groups of people and to select a negative word that you associate with each group. Your responses will help psychological scientists understand the process of word-group association which is important for understanding the cognitive and neural processes involved when people form impressions.

Paradigm-Social

The current study is part of a larger project taking place within the Social Behaviour Research Group at the University of Exeter. Our aim is to examine the process by which people make word-group associations, a topic of considerable interest to social researchers interested in the way people interact with one another.

Your task is to look at images portraying groups of people and to select a negative word that you associate with each group. Your responses will help social researchers understand the process of word-group associations which is important for understanding the social processes involved when people form impressions.

To begin the study, please press the "Click Here" button at the bottom of this page. After doing so, you will be asked a few questions regarding your feelings about our goals as scientists. You will then be directed towards an image followed by several adjectives. Your task is to choose one of these adjectives to describe the group featured in the image.

Thank you very much for your time. Without you, we could not complete our research.

Before we begin, we would like to know your opinions about science. Please indicate whether you agree or disagree with each statement below.
